

Event Brief

A new team of busy managers needed to spend time doing business planning and have an opportunity to get to know each other better in a more informal setting, whilst linking in to some team development objectives specific to this team.

Requiring a full day for meeting and overnight accommodation for day one, the client wanted the team building day on day two.

The second day required careful consideration and planning that incorporated:

- Opportunities for delegates to get to know each other better
- An element of competition that did not take over the purpose of the day
- Incorporate some business objectives around strategic and action planning

Client Testimonial

“Right from the first conversation you asked and listened to what we wanted and tailored the event to deliver that - even as far as some great accommodation the night before.”
